HI GANG!

Me and the gang went off to a holiday camp this week - what a caper! You can read all about it on page 16! We've all the fun of the fair packed into 24 colourful pages. There's a super fairground game that you can play with your own gang on page 8 - all in all a bumper issue!

All Aboard!

If you would like a birthday request in your favourite comic, then simply send in a postcard with your name, age and date of birthday, no later than 7 weeks in advance to: BIRTHDAY REQUESTS, Get Along Gang, Marvel Comics, 23 Redan Place, Bayswater, London W2 4SA.

Be a clown!

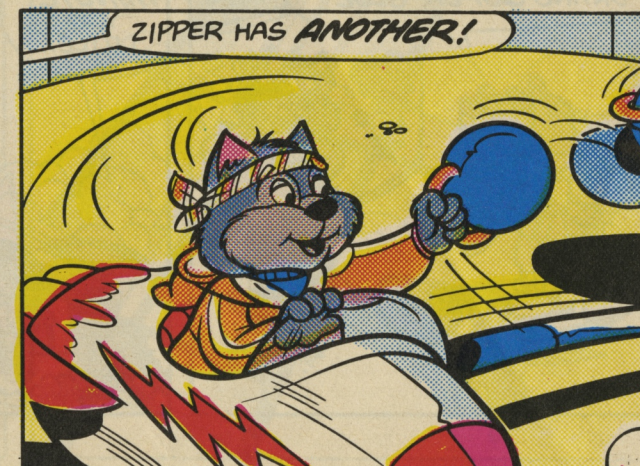

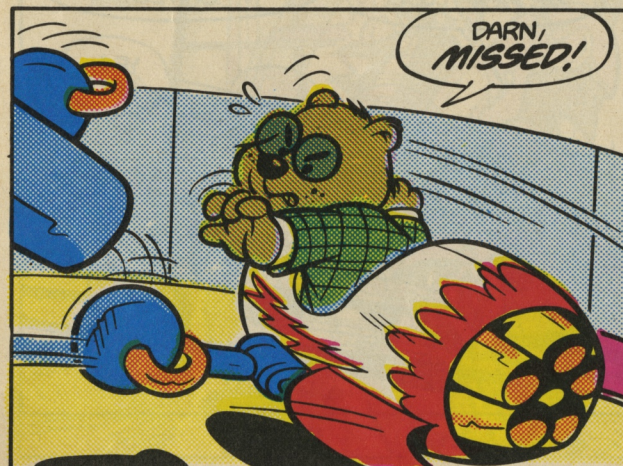

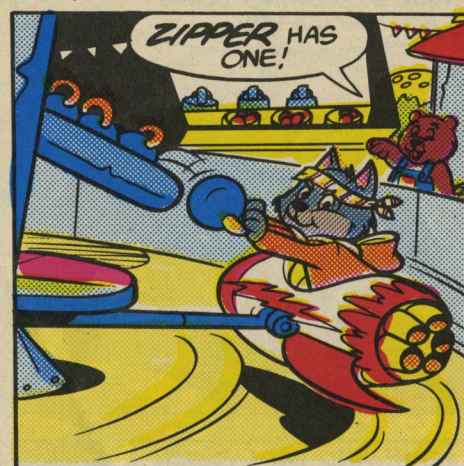

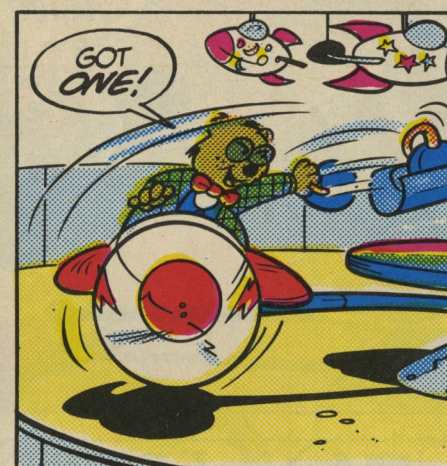

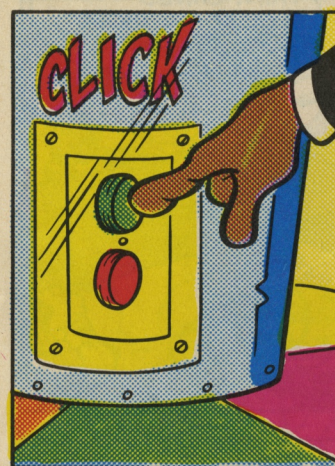

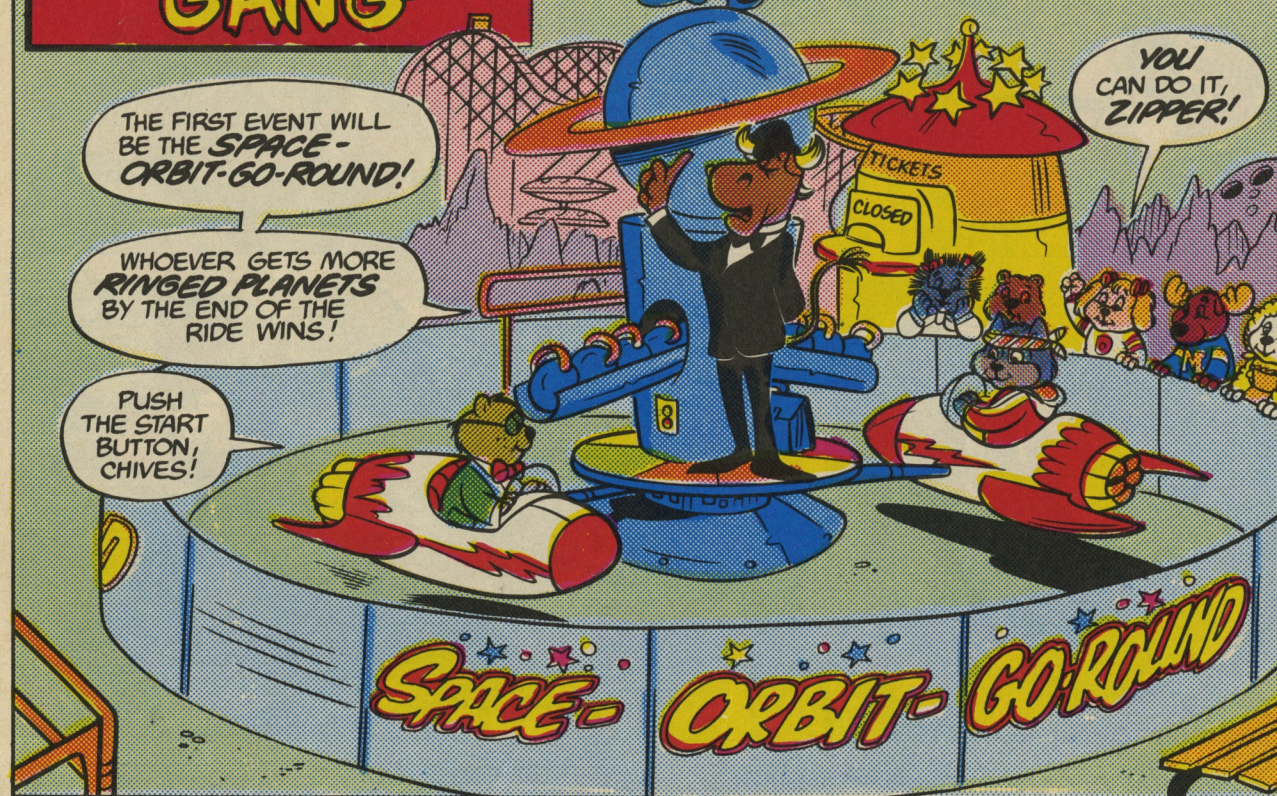

Paint your face to look like a clown! You can ask at home for old lipsticks and eyebrow pencils. Using scissors, first cut a hole in a ping-pong ball so that you can stick it on your nose. Use poster paint to paint it red. Then cover your face with a layer of cold cream and, using a cotton wool ball, put a generous amount of flour or talcum-powder on your face. Put your clown's nose in place and then, with a black eyebrow pencil draw lines, smiles, tears and eyebrows on your clown's face. Don't use paints on your skin because these may make it sore. Don't use food-dyes either, because they are very difficult to get off. When you want to clean your face use cold cream and tissues to wipe it off and then wash your face as normal!

Play the Bumper Car Race – a game for 2-4 players! All you need to play is colouring pens and dice. Each player choses a character and his matching bumper car colour. Then, take it in turns to throw the dice. The number you throw tells you how many spaces you can colour with your own character's colour. When all the spaces are filled, the winner is the one who has the most coloured in spaces!

Fun Fair Game

Denise Fairley from Edinburgh.

Everybody needs a friend
No matter what they say,
Its lots of fun to Get Along,
To read and sing and play.
Help each other all the time
While you live and grow,
Getting along can be such fun,
Be happy as you go.

Claire Baines from Derby

The get along gang has made me see,
That getting along is the best way to be,
By getting along every day,
I am helping others in every way.

Joseph Llowarch from Southport

Getting along is very good.
Getting along is what we should.
Montgomery, Bingo and Woolma Lamb
Get along whenever they can.
We should be like all of the gang -
a helping, sharing, caring band.

Lesley Ann Young from Beds.

Friends are good to play with.
Friends are good to stay with.
Friends are good to share with.
Friends are good to care with.

Steven Smith from Oldham

My name is Smith,
I give a little sniff
When all my friends go away.
But when they come back,
I give a little clap
And shout Hip Hip Hooray.

HOLIDAY CAMP CAPERS

The Gang had booked in for a week's holiday at the new Muttlin's Holiday Camp near Green Meadow.

"I can't wait to dive into the swimming pool," Bingo said as he unpacked his suitcase.

"It's the ice-rink for me," said Rocco eagerly. "What are you going to do, Flora?"

The little fox frowned. "I thought we were going to do things together," she said. "That's why we came on this holiday."

"Rubbish!" snorted Woolma. "We share the same cabins. That's enough of being together for me. I'm going to sunbathe all the time we're here."

"And I'm off for a cycle-ride," said Braker, putting on his cycling cap.

Rudyard thought for a moment. "I think Flora's right. We should stick together. It'll be more fun than going off on our own."

Montgomery agreed with this, as did Bernice and Lolly, but the others wanted to find their own things to do. Portia was already out flying her kite. Zipper had entered a running race and Dotty had accepted a game of hockey with a group of other children.

"We can have a game of cricket," Montgomery suggested to the few of the Gang who were left.

"I've brought my bat and ball."

Catchum and Leland were also at the holiday camp but they had sneaked in without paying. When they saw the Get Along Gang, Leland groaned.

"We can't go anywhere without running into them!" he muttered crossly. "We can't get up to any mischief with them around."

Catchum smirked as he thought of a nasty idea. "I know," he cackled in delight. "We'll get them all into trouble and then they'll be thrown out of the camp!"

Portia was the first to fall foul of the scheming pair. Catchum had removed the DO NOT PLAY ON THE GRASS notice and Portia now stood on the grass to fly her kite. When she wasn't looking Leland put the notice back again while Catchum went off to tell one of the stewards who look after the camp.

"What do you think you're doing?" growled the very cross steward to Portia, pointing to the sign nearby.

"But... but..." stammered poor Portia who was at a loss for words.

Catchum and Leland were still chuckling as they dropped a plastic shark's fin in the swimming pool behind Bingo. "This is too easy!" chuckled Catchum.

When Bingo looked around and saw the shark's fin he thought it belonged to a REAL shark!

"WAAAAH! ABANDON POOL!" he cried.

"SHARK!" Everybody leapt out of the swimming pool, knocking their toes and banging their knees in their haste. When they discovered it was only a joke shark's fin they complained to the steward who ordered Bingo out of the pool. "We don't want jokers in this camp!" he snapped.

"This is going better than I'd planned!" giggled Catchum as they entered the roller rink. Rocco was speeding around the rink on roller-skates when Catchum squirted glue in front of him. "Yipes!"

wailed Rocco as his skates stuck in the glue and he toppled over. All the other skaters swerved to miss Rocco and crashed into a heap at one side of the rink. The rink steward was very annoyed with Rocco. "If you can't skate properly you'll have to leave!" he said sternly.

Next Catchum and Leland broke Woolma's deckchair for which she got the blame and then they moved the sign which directed the cyclists around the camp so that Braker ended up cycling through the camp dining room! Zipper had gone to sleep after his race so Leland took his dirty running shoes and made footprints all over the clean floors of the camp. Then he left the shoes where the stewards would find them.

Finally they threw a cricket ball through one of the camp windows. Montgomery and the others were told off for being so careless about where they hit their ball.

"Huh! So much for our week's holiday," grumbled Rocco as they packed their suitcases again. "We've all got into trouble and have been asked to leave."

"I don't understand it," frowned Montgomery. "I know we didn't hit our ball far enough for it to break a window. Something funny is going on here."

"If we had stayed together this might not have happened at all," Flora reminded them all!

Suddenly they heard a commotion from outside. Catchum and Leland had climbed onto the roof of the Gang's cabin to play one last dirty trick. They were going to bomb the Gang with soot-filled bags as they left the cabin but Catchum had slipped and was now holding onto the gutter with his fingers to stop himself from falling.

"H-HELP!" he squealed as Leland tried unsuccessfully to pull him back up.

Catchum's screams brought the stewards who looked very worried. "Our ladder's broken and we can't reach him without it," they told the Gang.

"Now we know who's been making our holiday a misery," Montgomery said crossly. "Still, we can't leave the silly twit to fall."

The Gang ran back inside their cabin and emerged with a large blanket. They all held it underneath Catchum and Dotty shouted, "Jump, Catchum! We'll catch you!"

"Not blooming likely!" cried the petrified Catchum. "You might miss!" CRRUUNNCH!

Leland accidentally trod on Catchum's fingers. "YEEEOOW!" Catchum wailed as he let go of the gutter and fell into the blanket.

"Well done, kids," said one of the stewards. "We can see who has really been causing all the trouble around here!"

Catchum and Leland were taken to the camp kitchens where they were made to wash piles and piles of dirty dishes to make up for all the bother they had caused. "You and your plans!" grumbled Leland as he accidentally dropped a plate on Catchum's foot.

The Gang chuckled as they looked into the kitchen. "We're special guests of Muttlin's camp," smiled Bernice. "We can do anything we like free of charge!" And while Leland dropped yet another plate they went off to find a game to play together.

THE GANG IN GERMANY

Dear Montgomery,
I have got all your comics from issue 1. I now live in Germany and my mum orders it for me.
I have been told that my copy is the only one that comes from England.

Christian Thompson.

I'm sure there must be lots of readers abroad. Let's hear from all you readers from over the seas.

BAKED MONTGOMERY

Dear Montgomery,
This is a photo of my birthday cake that my mummy made. My sister and I loved watching the Gang on tv and I get your comic.

Daniel Sanchez-Garcia.

Mmmm, I look delicious!

LIZZY'S POEM

Dear Montgomery,
This is a poem I have written about the Gang:-
In the gang are Portia and Dotty,
Then there's Bingo who always seems potty.
There's Woolma, Zipper and Montgomery too,
the leader of the Gang.
They always get along together,
well, always when they can.
The Caboose is painted red and yellow.
There's always fun in Green Meadow.

Lizzy Short.

GANG GAGS

Dear Montgomery,
Are you enjoying your summer holidays? I hope so, because I am!

Here are some jokes for you:-

Q. What sort of meat does Zipper eat when he returns from Karate?

A. Chops!

Q. What do you call Catchum when he breaks into a meat factory?

A. A Hamburglar!

Claire Bonfante.

Jokes like these make summer even more fun!

Dear Mr Newsagent,

Could you please save me a copy of the Get Along Gang comic every week.
